119 WOOLEN TAPESTRY FLEMISH, MIDDLE OF THE 17TH CENTURY

From a set of the story of the Emperor Marcus Aurelius. The present tapestry shows the Emperor commending his son to the care of two philosophers. The Emperor is represented standing in front of his throne, his son to his left, while the two philosophers stand to the left of the composition. This composition of life-size figures shows the influence of Rubens, who introduced a new style into tapestry design. A characteristic detail is the carefully rendered colorful Persian rug spread in front of the throne. The border is typically Flemish, 17th century, with fruit garlands suspended and held by amorini; in the middle of the side borders are Renaissance consoles on which a parrot and a falcon are seated. The predominant colors are tan and blue, with touches of purple and red. The lower border has a cartouch with the inscription "Marcus Aurelius filium philosophis comendat", "Marcus Aurelius commends his son to the philosophers." Height, 10 feet 9 inches; width, 7 feet 11 inches
